Support for Australian Apprentices with disability

July 2012

The Australian Government, in acknowledging the contribution people with disability make to their communities and workplaces, provides additional support to Australian Apprentices with disability to help them reach their full potential as skilled workers.

What support is available for Australian Apprentices with disability?

Australian Apprentices with disability and their employers may be eligible to receive additional assistance under the Australian Apprenticeships Incentives Program.

A range of assistance is available to support Australian Apprentices with disability, including Disabled Australian Apprentice Wage Support which is paid to employers, and assistance for tutorial, interpreter and mentor services for apprentices.

Assistance is also available through the Employment Assistance Fund which helps people with disability and mental health condition by providing assistance to purchase a range of work related modifications and services. Employers can access the scheme via JobAccess or through Disability Employment Services or Job Services Australia.

This assistance is intended to help the Australian Apprentice with disability, either directly, or indirectly through their employer, to reach their full potential as a skilled worker and to ensure that they are not excluded from participation in the Program.

What is Disabled Australian Apprentice Wage Support?

Disabled Australian Apprentice Wage Support (DAAWS) is an Australian Government incentive payable to an employer who employs an Australian Apprentice who satisfies the disability eligibility criteria in an Australian Apprenticeship.

This wage support is also available to an employer who employs an Australian Apprentice who becomes disabled during their apprenticeship or traineeship.

How are tutorial, interpreter and mentor services provided?

Tutorial, interpreter and mentor services are available to Australian Apprentices who have been assessed as eligible for DAAWS and who require additional assistance with their off-the-job training.

This form of assistance is payable only to the Registered Training Organisation (RTO) in respect of an Australian Apprentice eligible for DAAWS where the Australian Apprentice is experiencing difficulty with the off-the-job training component of their Australian Apprenticeship because of that disability.

The Occupational Assessment supports the provision of additional assistance and the RTO proposes specific additional assistance related to off-the-job training.

Payments for these services are made directly to the RTO providing or facilitating the service.

Hunter New England Health— employer of apprentices with a disability

Hunter New England Health has been a proactive employer of people with a disability for 15 years. The service has recruited, trained and provided long-term opportunities for more than 50 apprentices and trainees with a disability. Chief Executive of Hunter New England Health Terry Clout says the apprentices are valued highly within the organisation.

“We are committed to employment practices that are fair and equitable and we value the diversity of the individuals who work for Hunter New England Health. We not only provide opportunities for people with disabilities to gain skills development, training, and open employment within our organisation, but have engaged and retained valuable staff,” Mr Clout says.
